Sustaining Our Future

The County has a master plan for the Tijuana River Valley Regional Park which includes a mix of short- and long-term projects, and maintaining a healthy balance of recreation and preservation is at the forefront of all development efforts. DPR is working on several restoration projects designed to revitalize habitats that have been weakened by things like overuse, drought and pollution

The County is also leading studies to identify short- and long-term solutions addressing public safety concerns associated with the Tijuana River, and complications brought by seasonal water flows. This comprehensive analysis – which includes participation at the local, state, national and international level, will help to will help to prioritize projects that can prevent trash, sediment and sewage from entering the Tijuana River and its tributaries. While no amenities are built within the flood plain, trails that meander through may be temporarily closed to protect the health and safety of all visitors while cleanup efforts are underway.

Tijuana River Valley Regional Park Campground

Set below Spooner's Mesa – roughly a mile south of the Tijuana River and east of the Pacific Ocean – this unique 79-acre campground offers breathtaking views of the valley. It contains 51 primitive campsites and is the only campground in the County system to offer yurts – 10 covered camping spaces with doors, windows, bed frames and room for six to 10 people. Other amenities include an amphitheater, nature education center, robust nature play area, a bocce court, cornhole and horseshoe pits. Restrooms with showers are available and the campground is staffed 24 hours/day by rangers and a live-on volunteer host. Reasonably priced and set in isolation from busier park areas, this picturesque locale is truly one-of-a-kind!

Wildlife

Burrowing Owl

Tijuana River Valley Regional Park (TRVRP) offers more than 1,800 acres of diverse habitats that enhance visitor's experiences – from dense riparian forests along the Tijuana River to coastal maritime sage scrub on top of Spooner's Mesa.

The Valley is a unique area containing large, contiguous blocks of high quality habitat that support numerous sensitive plant and animal species. For example, riparian areas within the TRVRP provide habitat to three federally endangered birds including the light-footed clapper rail, the southwestern willow flycatcher, and the least Bell's vireo.

Other onsite vegetation communities include mule fat scrub, chaparral, maritime succulent scrub, freshwater marsh, and native and non-native grasslands. Together, these vegetation communities potentially support 40 special status plant species and 56 special status animal species.

TRVRP is critical to wildlife because it is part of the Pacific Flyway, which provides foraging and breeding habitat for many migrating bird species. Because of its importance to wildlife, the area has been designated a biological resource core area in the City of San Diego's Multiple Species Conservation Program (MSCP), and lies almost entirely within the Multi-Habitat Planning Area (MHPA).

Birdwatchers find the spring and fall bird migration season especially productive where over 340 bird species have been sighted in the Valley. Two of the best birding spots include Dairy Mart Pond which is located in the north east corner of TRVRP and the Bird and Butterfly Garden, which is recognized as a back yard wildlife habitat by the National Wildlife Federation, which is located off of Hollister Street.
