About the Park

This charming County park is adjacent to Old Town in San Diego and features six restored Victorian homes and the city’s first synagogue, Temple Beth Israel. It is a fine example of late 1880s-1890s architecture, with homes built in a variety of styles including Nineteenth Century Vernacular, Classic Revival, Slick Eastlake, Queen Anne and Italianate. Each structure was carefully transported to this park location, carrying with it a rich cultural history that is explained during docent-led history tours. To the north of the homes is a large sprawling lawn—a popular destination for weddings and event. The smaller Temple lawn hosts a variety of services and Summer Movies in the Park. Parking is free and the property is jointly managed by the nearby Waterfront Park team.

Meet a Ranger

Ranger Hannah works at both Waterfront and Heritage County Parks, managing a variety of tasks from leading tours and managing event reservations, to running maintenance and park beautification projects. Prior to working for this park team, she spent several years working at Wilderness Gardens County Preserve in Pala, giving her experience in both open space and urban settings, as well as for Maryland State Parks. Her educational background is in history, anthropology and philosophy—great compliments to her leadership of a recent project to create and install new educational panels in Heritage’s History Room.

The County of San Diego Department of Parks and Recreation maintains 23 regional parks across the region. The Rad Regional Parks series shines a light on these properties, and the diverse amenities, services and programs they offer. This series is part of the County’s overarching Experience the Outdoors Program, championed by Board of Supervisors Chair Nathan Fletcher, to encourage more people to spend quality time outside; breaking down barriers to visitation through inclusive and equitable participation practices.
